The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-12, 21, and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over JP 55-34042, Lee (US 5780089), and Prasad et al (US 6287603).

JP 55-34042 discloses the addition of cyclodextrin to butter oil and emulsification with water (see abstract).

Lee discloses a flavor composition comprising a fat/oil flavor and cyclodextrin (see entire document, especially the Examples).

Prasad et al disclose a cyclodextrin flavor delivery system, wherein the cyclodextrin serves to improve food texture (see entire patent, especially column 2, lines 42-48).

Improvement of flavor and textural stability would be no more than obvious to that of JP 55-34042, Lee (US 5780089), and Prasad et al (US 6287603) as the same components are used.

The claims differ as to the specific application (topical, after heat treatment) and the delivery of the cyclodextrin in the absence of additional ingredients other than fat.

Once the art has recognized the use of cyclodextrin with flavors to provide stability, the use and manipulation of the cyclodextrin would be no more than obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art. The decision as to when to add the cyclodextrin would be case specific and easily determined by the ordinary worker. Furthermore, a flavor powder as taught by both Lee (column 2, lines 42-49) and Prasad et al (column 5, lines 27-37) could easily be incorporated into a food prior to heat treatment, added topically at any time, or incorporated or topically added after heat treatment. Applicant attaches no criticality to delivery of the cyclodextrin in the absence of additional ingredients other than fat. The presence or absence of additional components at the time of addition is merely a matter of choice. The prior art has recognized the ability of cyclodextrin to provide stability. Its use and manipulation in other foods would be no more than obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art.

It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made to use any type of application (i.e. incorporated into a food prior to heat treatment, added topically at any time, or incorporated or topically added after heat treatment) because the use of cyclodextrin with flavors to provide stability is well-known in the art.

Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
